

This open-access quarterly science digest was launched in 2017 and is dedicated to spreading awareness about the concept of science diplomacy and harnessing its power to achieve sustainable development. It encloses articles related to innovation diplomacy, techplomacy, STI diplomacy, etc., along with international MoUs, forthcoming events, recent publications, and policy developments. To foster attention on the current critical issues, it invites articles from distinguished experts in areas of science policy, diplomacy and technological innovations. The digest strives to create awareness on key current and future global issues and to promote the linkages between science, technology, innovation and international affairs.

All articles published in Science Diplomacy, like perspectives, opinions, commentaries, general articles, etc., are deemed to reflect the individual views of the authors and not the official points of view of CSIR-NIScPR.
